War, sharp and decisive, is the only means by which the Republic can now be saved from premature death. The remedy is severe, but the emergency is desperate. The country is stricken down with a malady the most virulent and the most dan gerous. No half way remedies—no ad-ministering of harmless sedatives—no doubtful medication will meet the case. The application must be vigorous and in-mediate. The disease must be plucked out before it has fainted the entire system. The virus must be extracted before it has poisoned the springs of our national life. These ere the words of one of the old set lers who had just learned that his Yankee neighbor had pocketed $600, the profit from half an acro of strawberries. He saw and apprecisied the necessity for a change in his system of cultivation; for this sum was larger than the product of his whole farm, and that not a small one neither.

tration: for this sum was larger than the product of his whole farm, and that not a small one neither.

That which gratified me as much as any thing else was a visit to the farm of Dr. Beckwith, little more than a mile from Cobden Station. The dector came from way down East, in the State of Maine, and is thoroughly imbused with the idea that whatever land a man tills should be well tillied. He has a mental aversion for atumps; and to the end that the nulsance should be effectually put out of sight, has arranged some logunious machinery by the sid of which he has removed every restige of the forest which he undertook to subdue. In his hasbandry he makes tase of rollers and other contrivances, the work of his own hands; and his little farm is now a model of nestness and good tillage. Three wears ago it was a tract of uncultivated woodland.

We think that this will become the great fruit region of America, and that in this respect it has advantages over every other secution of the country. These advantages are seen altogether in the warm climate and the producer is brought to the very door of all the great menters of the Northwest. Fruit put on the case at five o'clock this afternoon will be in Chicago at eight o'clock town row morning. St. Louis is still nearer than Chicago, and I have already stated that in the production of early fruit state that in the production of early fruit stated that the contribute of the contribute and the contribute of early fruit was at the contribute of early fruit and the production of early fruit at the contribute of the contribute of the c

Cars will be built with especial reference to the darrying of fruit, and if one train will not accommodate the abpyers, additional trains will be put upon the road. How civilization is progressing here may be gathered from the fact, to wit: that just before the Illinois Central railroad was made, land in this withinity was officred at twelve and a half cents an acre, and no buyers. It now brings, in some instances, seventy-fire dollars, and even as high as $100 per acre; these high prices being paid for cleared and in the vicinity of the railway station. Land not yet cleared is worth fifteen or twenty deliars per acre, the price depending upon the locality.

Cotton and tobacco have been planted in southern Illinois to a considerable artent this year, and the cultivation of these articles will be largely increased, as year after year proves the profitableness of their production. There are some fine cotton fields within six miles of this place, and, after considerable to converse to the profitable theory of the guity, I am led to believe that this part of the state (southern l'linois) will send 6,000 beles to market this year. I have heard the crops estimated as high as 20,000 belies. It would have been much larger than that, even, could not be surprised if the crop of 1883 comes up to 100,000 belies.

I trust you will not consider it altogether out of place in this leiter if I state a fact, the dwellers in the warmer portions of Illinois, and wherever her is not easily procured. The theory is well established, and is laid down in almost svery work on chemistry that the evaporation of water tends to cool all surrounding substances, and with chemical, which evaporate verp rapidly, an intense dogree of cool can be obtained. Farriday encoded in freeding substances, and with chemical, which evaporates on the surface, cooling the cored for the surface fo

A CHANGE OF PROGRAMME. THE OPERATION OF ORDER NO. 1. NOT A TRADING BUT A MILITARY POST, &C.

[Special Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.]
GATORE HOUSE, MERFRIES, July 93d, 1868.
I have again to report the city of Memphis in the hands of the federal military authorities. It is not a disagreeable task for me to perform, considering the fact that all men con-nected with The Tainung office have over and over again been promised by the rebels allowed to communicate with you at all, except through the medium of raps from the other world. But this is joking upon a serious subject; I'll no more of it. GEN. HOVEY'S ORDER, NO. 1.

orce, Kurmwax—Gentlemen, I propose but one bing, that is to make Memphis a part and ortion of the Upited States, and to that end he first thing to be accomplished to the have Il its citizens good and loyal citizens of the Brigadier Gen. Hovey held the position of commandant at this point for but very few days, yet, should be never hold as important, a position again during his life, he has by his order No. 1, carned for himself both glory and remown. His name will be remembered by some of the residents here as long as they shall live, and it is fair to be presumed that their remembrances cherebed of his brief reign will be none of the most pleasant. But with the loyal hearted as fourners here and the few loyal residents, he is popular merely from the fact of having issued order No. 1.

Gen. W. T. Sharman took command of the poet of Memphis yesterday, and came out in the papers of that merning amnouncing that all the orders of his predecessors would be enforced. This was characteristic of the man. It did not specify in so on many words that order No. 1 of Gen. Hovey's would be and the first. He did not specify in so on many words that order No. 1 of Gen. Hovey's would be and the heart and the hear of the first. to leave immediately, which he did at de-quick, accompanied by a host of large small boys shouting traitor. Marshal. Pursuant to notice appearing in the Trinuws of Tuesday, the parties heretofore authorized to form companies, and several of the most prominent citizens of Chicago, met Adjutant General Fuller at Bryan's lower hall, yesterday, for consultation. If all who had applied were able to fill up to the desired number, he should be astemahed. It was too good to be true. If Chicago, through her committee of citizens had been in essaion where he could have asked their advice as to the propriety of granting these permissions to recruit, the necessity for calling this meeting would not have arisen.
